The M113 is phasing out with the arrival of the Armored Multi-Purpose Vehicle, or AMPV. First fielded in 2020, the AMPV reached full production in 2023. The vehicle is built by BAE, which also produces the Bradley on the same platform, and the two share significant mechanical parts.

As for the Bradley, the Army has been looking for a replacement for almost three decades. In 1999, the Army launched the first of two now-cancelled replacements for the Bradley, which the Army has used since 1981.
